FORENSIC RESEARCH · ADVERSE FINDINGS · VERSION 2

Currenc Group Inc.

Nasdaq: CURR · Cayman Islands · Foreign Private Issuer · CIK 1862935

Date 21 October 2026 · Last price US$2.42 (19 Oct 2026) · Market cap ~US$272m
Status Internal working document. Not investment advice. Not for distribution without the disclosures at section 14.

Principal finding. On 7 October 2026 the company disclosed that the High Court of Malaya has made a charging order absolute over the 100,465 Tranglo shares held by its subsidiary Seamless Group, enforcing a Singapore judgment in favour of Ripple Markets APAC with approximately US$23.95m of principal unsatisfied. From that date the creditor may seek a forced sale of those shares. Those are the identical 100,465 shares the company agreed in January 2026 to sell to New Margin Holding for US$400m. The asset on which the entire remaining equity value depends is encumbered and subject to creditor enforcement.

Scope note. This version replaces the review of 21 October 2026 and corrects two findings in it (section 12). The unsourced allegations in section four of the originally supplied document — a US$90m "dumping syndicate", nominee wash trading and predicted fabricated announcements — remain excluded and should not be published. Everything below is sourced to filings, court reporting or market data.

1. Executive Summary

US$2.42	US$150m	+46.6%	US$23.95m	2 yrs
CLOSE 19 OCT 2026	ACCUMULATED DEFICIT	SHARE COUNT, 10 MONTHS	JUDGMENT UNSATISFIED	GOING-CONCERN DOUBT

Currenc is a Cayman-incorporated foreign private issuer that reached Nasdaq in 2024 through the INFINT SPAC, in a de-SPAC from which approximately 98% of the trust was redeemed. It carries a going-concern qualification in two consecutive audited years, an accumulated deficit of US$150m, a declining operating business, and a capital structure that has expanded the share count by roughly 47% in ten months through an equity line, convertible notes and a resale registration equal to about 65% of the then-outstanding shares.

Its restructuring rested on two pillars. The first, a reverse merger with Animoca Brands, was suspended on 22 September 2026 with no new timetable. The second, the US$400m sale of its 60% interest in Tranglo, has not been announced as closed and now faces a charging order absolute over the very shares to be sold. Both pillars are impaired at the same time.

This report does not adopt a price target. A target of zero is not supported: the company has real revenue, a contracted US$400m disposal and a Chinese private-equity counterparty. The case is one of severe balance-sheet, enforcement and dilution risk, not of a worthless shell.

2. Finding One — The Tranglo Shares Are Encumbered and Subject to Forced Sale

By Form 6-K filed 7 October 2026, the company disclosed that it was informed on 1 October 2026 that the High Court of Malaya had made a charging order absolute over 100,465 ordinary shares in Tranglo Sdn. Bhd. held by Seamless Group Inc. The order enforces a Singapore judgment dated 17 April 2025 in favour of Ripple Markets APAC. Reported principal outstanding is approximately US$23.95m; some coverage frames the wider dispute at about US$27m.

From 7 October 2026 the judgment creditor may commence further enforcement and seek a sale of the charged shares. Seamless has indicated it may seek to protect its interests as to valuation, manner and terms of any sale.

> WHY THIS IS THE CENTRAL FACT
> The 100,465 shares under the charging order are the same 100,465 shares that are the subject of the January 2026 share purchase agreement with New Margin Holding. The company cannot deliver clean title to an asset that is charged in favour of a judgment creditor without first satisfying or discharging that judgment. This is the most plausible explanation on the public record for why a transaction agreed in January, with a long-stop of 30 September 2026, has not been announced as completed. It also means a creditor owed roughly US$24m may be able to force the sale of an asset the company values at US$400m, in a process the company does not control.

3. Finding Two — Going Concern, Two Years Running

The FY2025 Form 20-F carries an auditor's going-concern paragraph. It records an accumulated deficit of US$150m and a net loss of US$18.5m for the year, and states that these conditions raise substantial doubt about the company's ability to continue as a going concern, with no adjustments made to the financial statements for the outcome of those uncertainties. The 20-F states that the audited statements for both FY2024 and FY2025 carry substantial-doubt disclosure.

The FY2024 position, from the F-1/A going-concern note as at 31 December 2024, was cash of US$63.8m against a working capital deficit of US$57.9m and a net capital deficit of US$41.8m, with a net loss of US$38.8m for the year.

METRIC	FY2024	FY2025	DIRECTION

Revenue	US$46.4m	US$37.8m	Down 18.5%; down 10.3% excluding divested TNG Asia and GEA
Net loss	US$38.83m	US$18.50m	Narrower, but FY2025 includes US$16.5m of headquarters expense
EBITDA	—	–US$13.2m	Tranglo and WalletKu combined contributed only US$2.6m
Accumulated deficit	—	US$150m	Against a US$272m market capitalisation
Net capital deficit	US$41.8m	not located	Working capital deficit US$57.9m at FY2024

Within FY2025 the company recorded a US$4.8m loss on extinguishment of loans and a US$2.3m goodwill impairment. Gross margin improved to 40.8% and operating expenses fell to US$23.4m, so the operating business is not without merit — but group EBITDA remained a US$13.2m loss and the only EBITDA-positive units are Tranglo and WalletKu, one of which is contracted to be sold and is now charged to a creditor.

4. Finding Three — The Disposal Counterparty Is Also the Lender

New Margin Holding Limited is the offshore vehicle of NewMargin Ventures, a Chinese private equity firm described as managing more than RMB 40bn and having backed over 300 companies. It is the agreed buyer of the Tranglo stake for US$400m, payable US$200m at closing and US$200m within ninety days after closing.

The same counterparty is also the company's convertible note financier. On 8 October 2025 Currenc entered a Securities Purchase Agreement with New Margin for up to US$33m of unsecured convertible notes with warrants. An initial US$4.4m principal closed for approximately US$4m net, with the balance drawable in tranches subject to conditions.

> WHY THE ENTANGLEMENT MATTERS
> A single counterparty that is simultaneously (i) the acquirer of the issuer's principal operating asset, (ii) its convertible creditor and (iii) a prospective holder of its equity on conversion, has interests that are not aligned with public shareholders on price. The disposal price, the drawdown conditions and the conversion mechanics are negotiated across the same table. A buyer who is also a lender has leverage over a seller with a going-concern qualification and a judgment creditor at the door. The deferred US$200m second instalment is unsecured counterparty credit, not cash in hand.

5. Finding Four — The Dilution Machine

This is the material risk the originally supplied document missed entirely, and it is measurable.

DATE	ORDINARY SHARES OUTSTANDING	SOURCE / NOTE
27 June 2025	76,084,675	August 2025 resale prospectus
31 December 2025	76,611,444	Later prospectus summary
October 2026	~112,300,000	Market data, 19 October 2026
Change, Dec 2025 to Oct 2026	+35.7m / +46.6%	In roughly ten months

5.1 The instruments driving it

- Arena equity line. Entered 10 February 2025, initially up to US$10m of ordinary shares issuable in tranches. Filings list 10,000,000 shares plus 150,000 commitment-fee shares; a later prospectus describes up to 20,000,000 shares issuable to Arena plus 600,000 commitment-fee shares. An equity line issues shares at the issuer's election into whatever liquidity exists, which is structurally dilutive in a falling market.
- Resale registration. A Form F-1 (333-284957, 4 August 2025) registers the resale of up to 50,070,187 ordinary shares — approximately 65% of the 31 December 2025 share count — comprising the Arena shares and shares issued to creditors and noteholders. Prospectus Supplement No. 9 is dated 19 May 2026; a further 424B3 was filed 24 September 2026.

- New Margin convertible notes. Up to US$33m, maturing 8 October 2027, 5% interest, convertible at the holder's option at an initial US$1.85, with 50% warrant coverage also at US$1.85. Prepayment carries a 10% premium; on a change of control holders may demand 110% of principal or convert beforehand.
- Ratchet warrants. Warrants from the de-SPAC PIPE carry price protection for offerings at or above US$2.00 and full protection on both price and quantity for offerings below US$2.00. A full ratchet of that kind is the structural feature that converts a falling share price into accelerating dilution.

> THE THRESHOLD THAT MATTERS
> The stock closed at US$2.42. The ratchet trigger is US$2.00 — about 17% below. The 52-week low is US$1.32, well beneath it. The convertible notes and their warrants strike at US$1.85, currently in the money for the holder. Any financing priced below US$2.00 re-prices and increases the warrant position. This is the mechanism by which a weak tape becomes permanent dilution, and it is the single most quantifiable downside pathway on the public record.

6. Finding Five — The De-SPAC Left Almost Nothing Behind

Currenc reached Nasdaq via INFINT Acquisition Corporation. In connection with the special meeting, holders of 4,652,105 public shares redeemed at US$11.79 for approximately US$54.85m. An earlier redemption had already seen 2,661,404 Class A shares redeemed at about US$11.36, leaving roughly US$53.97m in trust as at 16 February 2024.

The trust balance immediately before closing was approximately US$1,119,024.

In other words, the company listed with effectively none of the SPAC's capital. The PIPE was correspondingly small: a convertible note of US$1,944,444 principal issued for US$1,750,000, plus 400,000 commitment shares and warrants over 136,110 shares, converting at US$10.00 and converted in full on 4 March 2025. A business that arrives on a public market with US$1.1m of trust money and a US$1.75m PIPE is dependent on post-listing financing from day one, which is precisely the pattern the subsequent equity line and convertible notes describe.

7. Finding Six — Management and Litigation History

Alex Kong (Alexander King Ong Kong) has been Chief Executive Officer since 16 August 2025 and Executive Chairman and a director since completion of the business combination. He is also chief executive of TNG (Asia) Limited.

October 2018

TNG Fintech acquires a 60% stake in Tranglo from Malaysian private equity fund manager Ekuinas.

April 2019

In an email dated 8 April 2019 to Bank Negara Malaysia, Kong acknowledged that a claimed US$115m Series A funding round had never materialised — reported in contemporaneous coverage of the subsequent litigation.

October 2019

Minority shareholders in Tranglo file an oppression suit against TNG Fintech, naming Kong as a defendant alongside Takis Wong and Tranglo co-founder Sia Hui Yong. Plaintiffs alleged the negotiations to acquire their minority stake were not conducted in good faith, and asserted that Kong had a record of two personal bankruptcies, in Malaysia and in Hong Kong. These are pleaded allegations; no judgment was located in this review.

2025

Kong is reported to have been sued in the High Court by a creditor, Lai Chi Ming Jimmy, for failure to repay approximately HK$10.7m (about US$1.37m) plus interest. The plaintiff is reported to have invested US$684,600 between August and October 2024 and to have received approximately 290,000 Currenc ordinary shares in exchange. Outcome not established in this review.

17 April 2025

Singapore judgment obtained by Ripple Markets APAC, later enforced by charging order over the Tranglo shares.

> HOW TO USE THIS
> Prior litigation involving a chief executive is a governance datapoint, not proof of anything, and pleaded allegations must be described as pleaded. The relevant and verifiable points are narrower: the same individual led the 2018 acquisition of the Tranglo stake, was a defendant in litigation brought by that company's minority holders, and is now chief executive of the listed entity selling that same stake while it is charged to a judgment creditor. The continuity is the finding. Any published version must be checked by counsel before it names an individual.

8. Finding Seven — Nasdaq Compliance

Nasdaq's Listing Qualifications staff issued a deficiency letter dated 12 January 2026 for failure to hold an annual general meeting within twelve months of fiscal year end, contrary to Listing Rules 5620(a) and 5810(c)(2)(G) and IM-5620. The notice had no immediate effect on listing. The company had 45 days to submit a compliance plan, with a potential extension of up to 180 days from fiscal year end, which the filings put at 29 June 2026. An extraordinary general meeting was scheduled for 25 February 2026.

The outcome was not established in this review and should be confirmed from the 6-K record before the point is used. Note also that the share price and market capitalisation are not currently in breach of the minimum bid price or market value thresholds — see section 12.

9. Finding Eight — The Animoca Suspension and the Audit Question

The transaction was announced on 3 November 2025: an acquisition of Animoca Brands by Australian scheme of arrangement under which Animoca shareholders would hold approximately 95% of the combined company. On 22 September 2026 the parties announced a suspension after exclusivity lapsed without a definitive agreement, citing a timetable that no longer fitted short- and medium-term objectives. Animoca states it remains committed to relisting; talks may resume if conditions permit.

One contemporaneous report attributes the suspension to audits remaining unfinished. If that is accurate it is a materially different and more adverse explanation than scheduling, and it should be run down in the filings before it is relied on. It is recorded here as reported, not as established.

10. Finding Nine — Operating Deterioration Beneath the Headlines

- Revenue fell 18.5% to US$37.8m in FY2025 from US$46.4m; 10.3% excluding divested units.
- Global airtime revenue fell 14.9%; local airtime revenue fell 47.1%.
- Remittance revenue rose 22% to US$22.2m on higher volume — but Tranglo's take rate was flat at 0.37%, so the growth is volume at an unchanged, very thin margin. That is the segment being sold.
- Group EBITDA was a US$13.2m loss; Tranglo and WalletKu together contributed US$2.6m of positive EBITDA. Removing Tranglo removes the larger part of what works.
- Headquarters expense of US$16.5m against group revenue of US$37.8m — 44 cents of head-office cost for every revenue dollar.

12. Corrections to Earlier Work and to the Source Document

CLAIM	STATUS	CORRECT POSITION
US$38.8m annual net loss	Correct	Correction to this reviewer's v1. The figure is accurate for FY2024 (US$38,826,762). V1 recorded it as uncorroborated. It is corroborated; it is simply not the latest year. FY2025 was US$18,503,560.
Company has lost going-concern ability	Supported	Substantial-doubt disclosure in both FY2024 and FY2025 audited statements. The source document was right on this point and understated it.
Tranglo sold; company is an empty shell	Partly	Agreed, not announced as closed, and the shares are now charged to a judgment creditor. The "empty shell" conclusion is premature in the opposite direction to the one the document intended: the company still holds the asset, but may not be able to sell it freely.
Price below US$1.00; market cap below US$50m	Wrong	US$2.42 and approximately US$272m as at 19 October 2026. 52-week range US$1.32–US$5.08. Neither threshold is engaged. Publishing this would discredit the document on sight.
Animoca deal terminated under SEC pressure	Unsupported	Suspended by mutual agreement; Animoca still committed to relisting. One report cites unfinished audits. SEC crypto scrutiny as the hidden cause is inference, not record.

Insiders failed to file Form 4	Inapplicable	As a foreign private issuer, Currenc's officers and directors are generally exempt from Section 16 and do not file Forms 3, 4 and 5. Use Schedules 13D/13G and Form 144 instead.
US$90m dumping syndicate, nominee wash trading, fabricated news	Excluded	Unsourced; the document hedges it with "if this inside information is true". Publishing unverified criminal allegations while holding a position in the security creates exposure under Rule 10b-5 and in defamation. Route for genuine evidence is the SEC Office of the Whistleblower.
Target price US$0.00	Not supported	The company has US$37.8m of revenue, a contracted US$400m disposal and an institutional counterparty. The documented risks are severe dilution, enforcement over the principal asset and going concern — not a zero.

14. Disclosures Required Before Publication

MANDATORY, AND TO BE COMPLETED BY THE PUBLISHER

Any published version must disclose on its face every economic interest in the issuer held by the publisher and its affiliates at the time of publication — long, short or derivative — together with any intention to transact and any position held through a custodian or in transit between custodians. A party holding a long position who publishes bearish research, or who transacts around publication, invites the obvious inference and the regulatory consequence that follows it. Named-individual allegations require legal review before release.
